Sofia Rivas Project 1 Documentation

The initial design for the project was made in paint.

To the left was the design for the desktop version, to the right for the mobile version, including what was the original design for the navbar.

Due to time constraints, the navbar was made using bootstrap (its the only thing that utilizes bootstrap asides from the buttons) and it no longer has the drop-down menu.

Another change from the original design due to time constraints was the project carousel, which was just switched to a 4x4 grid gallery.

After getting critiques, I chose to ignore the one about moving the about me up, since it's supposed to be extra information and not the main focus of the page. The most crucial info about me is already displayed at the top. I did listen to the ones talking about how the navbar might be hard to read because of the color, but to not change with the design too much by changing the color, I instead decided to compromise by making the navbar text bold.
